URGENT CONFERENCE

Government Advised To

Into Session

JAPANESE ACTIVE

Opposition To Scheme
Due In Large Measure
To Propaganda

(Reuters' Pacific Service)

Peking, October 6.—The Government has telegraphed to the Delegation in Paris and to the Chinese diplomatic representatives abroad asking for an expression of opinion concerning the new consortium.

It is understood that the Government also expressed the opinion in these telegrams that China should not commit herself to any form of monopoly on the part of the consortium unless to save herself from absolute bankruptcy.

Change Of Policy Seen

Since Conclusion Of War
(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, October 5.—A Chinese financier in close touch with the Central Government states, with reference to the New Consortium, that China, having to depend entirely upon foreign loans at the present time, should exercise extreme caution in negotiating for such loans. Since the close of the Great War the foreign powers have adopted a diplomatic-economic policy with regard to China. Hence, the terms that the bankers of the new group wish to make to this country are severer than the conditions imposed in the past. According to the New Consortium's terms the foreign bankers will demand a certain measure of supervision over China's financial affairs as soon as their first big loan is advanced and they may even go so far as to ask for the control of the country's national finances.

Hence the Central Government should lose no time in calling a conference of the nation's leading financial experts with a view to adopting a definite policy towards the New Consortium. Nothing should be done without careful deliberation, nor should the Government accept any loan by which the nation's sovereignty will in the slightest degree be impaired.

The views of this financier represent the opinions of most of the officials connected with or close to the Central Government today. They are partly the natural views of men who hate to see their country and their people's officials lose control of financial affairs for the admitted reason that the Chinese are not as yet competent to manage them, and they are also to a large degree the result of carefully planned Japanese propaganda.

While the idea of the New Consortium met with a certain amount of opposition from its inception, the Chinese officials and people as a whole greeted it with favor and it is probable that the Consortium could have been made effective in this country if the plan could have been pushed hard from the beginning and realized in the course of last summer.

Now, however, both official and popular opposition to the Consortium has stiffened as a result of the skillfully managed Japanese and Anfu Club press campaign and means have been found to line up China's more important officials and financiers against it. In other words Japan, as is her usual policy in matters relating to China, has supported the Consortium in Paris and knifed it out here. Indeed her campaign has been so successful that there is but little chance, according to general Peking opinion, for the New Consortium ever to become a reality.

Hangchow Students Burn Japanese Goods

(China Press Correspondence)
Hangchow, Oct. 8.—A large consignment of piece goods from Japan reached Hangchow Sunday. Members of the Student Union got wind of their expected arrival and got busy. On their arrival the suspected goods were taken to the Chamber of Commerce for inspection. Many of the goods were indisputably of Japanese origin and had unquestionably been ordered subsequent to the boycott movement and these were taken by the students to the Public Playground on the shore of West Lake where they were heaped into a huge pile and fired. It is said that $10,000 worth of goods was thus destroyed. Two of the largest firms in the city are the offenders in the case. Public sentiment seems to approve the action of the students.

RESOLUTION ON KOREA OFFERED IN U.S. SENATE

Demands Heard By Japanese Presented At Meeting Held In Seoul

Senator James D. Phelan of California, Democrat, has introduced in the United States Senate a resolution sympathizing with the movement for Korean independence, according to a private cablegram received in Shanghai yesterday at the offices that have been established here by officers of the provisional government of Korea.

Demands made by a representative gathering of Koreans called by the Japanese authorities at Seoul on September 20 have been made public by the Shanghai headquarters of the Korean independence movement.

Four men from each province attended, a total of 52 delegates. The Japanese Government was represented by Mr. Yamagata, editor of the Seoul Press, and Mr. Otsuka, director of the Home Bureau. Among the Korean demands submitted were: popular assemblies in each county, district and province; freedom of speech, assembly, press and organization; compulsory education and equal school facilities with the Japanese; cessation of Japanese immigration; complete amnesty for all political offenders; equal civil rights for Koreans and Japanese; abolition of labor conscription for highways; equal rights for Koreans in fishing, lumbering and mining; important government positions on a merit basis alone; Korean judges be given equal power with Japanese judges; heads of villages to be chosen by the villagers.

Japan Alarmed Over Korean Activity, Reported

Peking, Oct. 6.—Tuchun Pao Kwel-ching and Civil Governor Kuo Chung-hsi of Kirin have sent a joint telegram to the Peking Government reporting that the Japanese, alarmed by the recrudescence of the Korean independence movement in both Vladivostok and Korea, have arranged for the establishment of police stations along the borders of Yenchow district, which constitutes the shortest overland route from Vladivostok to Korea.

Both officials point out to the Central Government that this plan, if carried through, will be a violation of China's sovereignty and that the Government ought not to allow it. They state that they have instructed the Taoyin of Yenchow to keep a close watch and report on all Japanese activities in his district and they desire in the meantime that Peking send them explicit instructions as to how to deal with the situation.

Cincinnati Wins Series For World Championship From Chicago White Sox

Pat Moran And His Reds Take Four Out Of Five From Gleason Crew; Chicago Wins
Third By 3-0 Score

(CHINA PRESS OWN SERVICE)
Manila, October 8.—By defeating the Chicago White Sox in four of the five games played, the Cincinnati team of the National League won the world's series, according to despatches received here.

Chicago defeated Cincinnati by a score of 3-0 in the third game. Cincinnati shut out Chicago by a 5-0 score in the fifth game. The scores of the first, second and fourth games, which were won by the National League champions, have not yet been received here.

Pat Moran brought Cincinnati its first world's series championship in history. Working on the theory that a sterling string of pitchers would transform the Reds into a championship aggregation, the old Club catcher developed a formidable string of twirlers. The system worked. He won the first National League flag for Cincinnati since 1877 and lost one game to the White Sox in the series of the championship of the world.

Dutch Ruether, Sallee, Eller, Fisher, Luque and Ring, with Chief Bender signed on late in the season to aid Moran in developing his string, were the pitchers that carried Cincinnati through.

Moran developed a great team around Jake Daubert at first and Heinie Groh, the old Giant star at third. Rath at second and Kopf at shortstop, both youngsters, rounded out the Cincinnati infield. In the gardens were Duncan, Roush and Neal. Wingo was the first-string catcher.

Chicago Again In Front

Winning a pennant isn't an event in Chicago. It is in Cincinnati. The Cubs were beaten in the world's series last year. Clarence Rowland and his White Sox won the big series from the Giants in 1917 and it wasn't very long ago that Frank Chance was responsible for bringing world's championships to the Windy City. Incidentally, Pat Moran was with Chance as second string catcher to Johnny Kling before Archer came along.

This season Kid Gleason had the Sox and Chicago had another great ball club. Eddie Collins, second sacker for Connie Mack when Cornelius was winning American League pennants for Philadelphia before the war; Shoeless Joe Jackson, ex-Cleveland sensation; Ray Shaik, premier catcher in the younger league; Gandil, former Washington first baseman, and Eddie Cicotte, whose knuckle ball helped bring a world's title to Chicago and Clarence Rowland two years ago, and Buck Weaver constituted the nucleus of veterans around which the Chicago team was built.

Leibold, Felsch and Jackson were in the outfield; Gandil, Eddie Collins, Risberg, a youngster, and Buck Weaver, made up the infield; Cicotte, Williams, Lowdermilk, Kerr and James were the first-string hurlers.

Yet Moran and his Reds defeated such a combination four out of five games for a world's series title! The telegram received from the Manila correspondent of THE CHINA PRESS corrects previous messages received in Shanghai.

On September 20 wireless operators here read a message that Cincinnati had defeated the New York Yankees in the World's series. The message was probably sent to read that Cincinnati was assured of a pennant in the National League and, New York, after staging a fight late in the season, had been finally eliminated by the Chicago White Sox.

Several words are known to have been lost in transmission but the message was sent to the press and printed because an attempt was made by league officials to reduce the number of games to be played this season and it was thought possible that the season ended in mid-September.

On October third, the American Wireless Service released a message bringing the score of the third game which Chicago won, 3-0. This is verified in the Manila telegram to this paper. No other details had been received in Shanghai until THE CHINA PRESS correspondent in Manila wired late yesterday.

Paris, October 6.—After calling upon M. Clemenceau during the day Colonel House of the American Delegation to the Peace Conference left Paris last night on his way to the United States. He told American newspaper correspondents that the first meeting not of the League of Nations itself but of the Council of the League of Nations would be held in Paris within two weeks after the Treaty of Versailles became effective.

A provision in the Treaty Colonel House pointed out, makes such a meeting necessary for the delimitation of the Sarre Valley coalfield. Colonel House added that if the United States were the third Power to ratify the Treaty it would be possible that the Council might discuss other problems.

Striking Chorus Girls In Parade On Broadway

Latest reports from New York are to the effect that the great strike of actors and actresses, forming the Actors' Equity Association, against the Producing Managers' Association, has ended in a victory for the strikers. The chorus girls joined in the strike in support of the principals and were followed by the musicians and stage hands. Almost every theater in New York was closed and rehearsals for the big fall productions were halted. The actors picketed the theaters, mounted on soap boxes they sang, joked and orated, amusing tremendous crowds. They also gave several big parades. This picture shows the chorus girls in parade on Broadway, with Marie Dressler, a famous comedienne who began her stage career as a chorus girl, leading them. The girls certainly look like winners.

ATTACKS ON RAILWAYS IN SIBERIA STOPPED

Explanation Given Of Rumors Of Anti-Government Plot
At Vladivostok

(Reuters' Pacific Service)

Omsk, October 6.—According to the latest news received here from Eastern Siberia, the raids of Bolshevik bands on the railway lines have ceased, and the traffic is now proceeding without delays.

With reference to certain rumors about the latest events in the Far East, the Secretary of the Council of Ministers, M. Guins, made the following declaration to representatives of the press.

"The Socialist revolutionary party worked out a plan for the establishment of a new socialist government. To carry out this plan it was decided to convoke illegally in Vladivostok an Assembly of Zemstvos. The government being well informed that the leaders of this movement had no support of the population behind them, did not attach great importance to this affair.

"The failure to carry out the coup d'etat was due not only to the concentration of military forces in Vladivostok, but also to the powerlessness of the conspirators. The representatives of the Allied Powers, in full agreement with their respective Governments, disavowed the new move in decisive terms, and gave the necessary instructions to their Consular agents in the Far East."

Peking, Oct. 6.—Today's Peking Jih Pao reports that the American Government has informed the Allied Governments interested in Siberia that, on account of the difference of opinion existing between America and Japan regarding the policing of the Trans-Siberian Railway, American troops can no longer take concerted action with the Japanese troops. Hence the United States will be obliged to withdraw her forces from Siberia and give up her share of the control of the Trans-Siberian Line. At the same time the American Government has, according to the Jih Pao, requested Japan to withdraw her troops simultaneously with the existing understanding between the two Governments that the Americans and the Japanese should take concerted action in all matters relating to Siberia. Conference At Vladivostok.

In connection with this report, it is stated by the American Legation that representatives of the interested Allied Powers in Vladivostok are at present holding renewed discussion concerning the administration of the Trans-Siberian and Chinese Eastern Railways by the Inter-Allied Technical Board. These discussions have not yet been completed and no permanent decisions covering the administration of these lines have so far been reached.

CHOLERAIC EPIDEMIC IS COVERED IN REPORT

Appearance Of Beri-Beri Noted In September Statement Among Japanese

The September report of the Municipal Health Department which was issued yesterday, besides dealing with matters pertaining to the general well being of the community, gives an amplified report of the choleraic epidemic of the summer. Excerpts from the report follow.

The epidemic of choleraic diarrhoea, which commenced at the beginning of July and reached its maximum in the first week of August, exhausted itself earlier than expected, comparatively few cases occurring in September. In previous epidemics the month of September has been almost as deadly as August.

This rapid flare up and early termination is probably accounted for by the long period of comparative immunity since 1912 when choleraic diarrhoea last assumed epidemic proportions.

Previous to 1912 there was, in recent years, a very severe epidemic in 1907 followed by a lessened though still epidemic incidence in 1909 and 1910. In all these years except the present the epidemic was severe in September.

During the present epidemic the number of Chinese deaths during July, August and September was 296, 283 and 69. During the weeks ending September 7, 14, 21 and 28, the number of deaths among Chinese from all forms of acute diarrhoea was 29, 18, seven and nine.

Beri-beri Among Japanese Amoebic Dysentery has shown its customary prevalence. There has been a considerable incidence of beri-beri among the Japanese community.

Toward the end of the month there were signs of a commencing special prevalence of paratyphoid fever among both foreigners and Chinese.

Those who have neglected to follow the recommendations of the public health notice as to vaccination against the typhoid fevers in May of each year are advised to obtain this protection without further delay.

During the first few years of residence in China typhoid vaccination should be repeated annually. In order to avoid interference with work it is advised to have the first injection on Saturday and the second on the following Saturday. In this way the slight indisposition following the first vaccination may be mitigated by a quiet life off during the week end.

It saves time and inconvenience to have smallpox vaccination done at the same time. These vaccinations have practically wiped out typhoid fever and smallpox from armies where done systematically.

A much stricter routine of life is called for in China than at home in order to keep well. The best time for vaccination against smallpox is the present so as to be forearmed against its inevitable recurrence during the early winter months.

A tabular statement of the occurrence of diseases in the Settlement and other tables follow:

The Frawley Company

"Lombardi Ltd." was played for the last time this season before a Shanghai audience last night by the Frawley Company and the response, though from a small audience, was enthusiastic. Gloria Fonda carried away the honors with her presentation of "Daisy," the dressmaker's gum-chewing model. From a rather slow beginning both the play and players improved as the evening progressed and it was a thoroughly pleasing and stimulating reaction that was left the playgoer when he stepped from the Lyceum Theater at its close.

Four more shows remain to be given before the Frawleys leave for Manila. Tonight it is "Forever After," with Miss Claribel Fontaine playing the lead opposite Rodney Hildebrand in an unusual and interesting drama of the war; Friday, "Polly With a Past"; Saturday a new play, "The Man Who Came Back." The final night, Monday, Mr. Frawley will produce "Three Wise Fools."

WHIZ-ZIZ-Z-BANG! IT'S A SOCCER OUTFIT

Returned Soldier Players To Stage Game Tomorrow With Shanghai Football Club

The Whizbangs, reminiscent of overseas battlefields, is the descriptive name chosen by a kicking aggregation of soldier footballers, who have entered the lists for the coming soccer season, and who will make their bow tomorrow in a preliminary game with the Shanghai Football Club at the latter's grounds at the race course. The name, it is explained, is taken from that given to one of the fifty-seven varieties of German shells that men who fought in the war became familiar with.

The line-up of The Whizbangs has not yet been announced, but selections will be made today and in order that no football talent may be overlooked Mr. R. R. Jones, honorary secretary, has sent out a request to all returned soldier players to report to him at 1 A Jinkee Road. The Whizbangs are to open the regular season on November 1 in a game with the Police.

SHANGHAI VOLUNTEERS WILL GET LATEST GUNS

Heavy Artillery And Machine Guns Are Given Council By British Government

A battery of 18-pounders to replace the 15-pounders now used by the Artillery Company, S.V.C., and modern machine guns to supplant the type at present in use, will be sent to Shanghai by the British Government as soon as shipping conditions allow.

The announcement of the acceptance by the Municipal Council of two machine guns from the Italian Government, through the Italian Consul-General here, is also made in today's Municipal Gazette. The guns are to be used by the Italian Company.

The British guns come as a result of Col. J. R. Young's visit of inspection some months ago and his report to the British War Office. Col. Young is the chief engineer for the British Command in China and was detailed by Hongkong to inspect the Shanghai defense forces.

The Italian guns, being of a different caliber from those hitherto used here, will require ammunition from the Italian Government. That has already been arranged and 200 rounds will be supplied each month by the Italian Government for training purposes and a larger supply for reserve, to be used only in case of actual service.

The Italian Consul-General has also notified the Municipal Council that 50 rifles for the use of the Volunteers will be delivered shortly by the gunboat, Sebastiano Caboto. The entire equipment will be stored at the Shanghai Volunteer headquarters and that belonging to the Italian Government will be kept so long as the unit exists.

New Film At Apollo

Three popular Triangle players, Norma Talmadge, Seena Owen and Tully Marshall are featured in the new Griffith Fine Arts drama—"Martha's Vindication" which will be shown tomorrow night at the Apollo Theater.

The story of the play hinges on the sacrifice of Martha for her friend Dorothea, when the latter loves too well and not wisely. Dorothea's intended is killed in an automobile smash before he can keep his promise to marry her, and Martha volunteers to place the baby with an old nurse, and save her friend from disgrace, thus giving herself the onerous task of caring for the illegitimate child and although an enemy tries to make it appear that the child is hers she reveals nothing of the true state of affairs until Dorothea herself makes the necessary explanation.

Perhaps the motion picture is the best medium yet discovered for conveying such lessons of virtue. It tells searching truths without brutality or offence. It is imperative that these cases in point find expression, for they are vital factors in life. No eloquence can utter such a sermon with such effectiveness as the picture, and of this, "Martha's Vindication" is a striking example.

You want more than weather protection.

The advantage of "Weatherproof Compo" roofing is that it not only gives complete weather protection, but that it gives protection from sparks and embers.

"Weatherproof" means protection in the fullest sense of the word—protection from the elements, protection from sparks, protection from cold and heat, and protection from roof expense. "Weatherproof" is the most economical type of roof you can buy, both in first cost and maintenance. And it costs less to lay—no skilled labor is required.

So many thousands know the advantages of "Weatherproof" that it takes the largest roofing mills in the world to supply the demand.

For a less expensive roofing we recommend "Scout" roofing as the best roofing at the price charged. This roofing is not offered as the highest quality made but longer service may be expected of it than is usual with low priced roofing. The saturation is asphalt. Heard Wins Three Of Ten Races At Kiangwan Meeting

Times Made Affected By Heavy Wind But Close Finishes Hold Interest Of Big Crowd

A program of ten good races was staged at the Kiangwan Race Course by the International Recreation Club yesterday before a large crowd. Although the times were comparatively slow on account of a strong wind, several close finishes and occasional big dividends kept the spectators interested.

Mr. A. J. P. Heard won three of the ten events, winning on Jack Scott in the Mid-Autumn Stakes, on Great Star in the Speedy Plate and on Hallow-E'en in the Mid-Autumn Handicap.

The latter race was spectacular. Realisation and Newcastle, ridden by Mr. Crockam and Mr. H. F. Hu, dead heated for third, after New Star, with Mr. C. T. Chu up, had placed second by a short head.

Springie, with Mr. C. C. Boyd up, won the Moderate Steeplechase comfortably from Ye Illusionist and Medina-Sidonia, which finished in the order named.

But three started the Autumn Cup race. Yellow Diamond, Mr. Morris up, Specialist, ridden by Mr. Tomono, and Railway, with Mr. C. R. Burkill riding were the only competitors and passed the judges' stand in this order.

Mr. Frank R. Vida registered his first win of the day on Rising Star, beating Little Dipper by a neck in the Public Holiday selling Plate and repeating his performance in the race, the Citizen's Plate, on Ralph de Palma. Ralph de Palma was two lengths ahead of Salaro at the winning post. Mr. L. F. Soong rode Little Dipper and Mr. Springfield was on Salaro.

The Chinese Gentleman Riders' Race furnished an amusing feature. Grey Diamond, Mr. D. H. King riding, after taking a long lead in a false start, turned and ran a race the wrong way. The jockey was unable to control the officer of the club after it had completed more than half the length of the course.

NOVELS

"Old Dad"

A New Zangwill Novel

Jinny The Carrier. By Israel Zangwill. The Macmillan Company.

During some twenty-odd years Mr. Zangwill has abstained from the writing of novels. Now, listen to the trials of "Mother Gander," the landlady. And because of Jinny we are told a romance of a yet earlier day, a day when the smugglers had their haunts all along the coast, and were indulged by all save the members of the Revenue Service. A very efficient young person, too, was this Jinny, quick-witted and warm-hearted, swift at repartee, always ready with a smile and a jest, courageous and devoted and loyal, driving fearlessly along the lonely roads in the tilt cart drawn by Methusalem, the old white horse, with her dog Nip dashing about, and at her belt the little horn she blew so cheerily, even in those dark days when her rival was getting all the business, and the little cart was well-nigh empty. She was popular with almost every one except Bundock, the local postman, who considered her an interloper on whom it was impossible to look with the favor he accorded the majority of her sex. Bundock, with his puns and his philanderings and his pride of place, is a very amusing person, but then there are a good many amusing persons and episodes in the book. The account of Will's attempt to compose a letter perfect in style and grammar and spelling with only the Bible to serve him as a guide through the mazes of orthography and composition, is very funny, and scarcely less amusing are Jinny's struggles with the "Universal Spelling Book," an extraordinary volume published in 1755, while the denouement of the story, when old Granter Quarles settles the lovers' difficulties by his energetic and totally unexpected behavior, is both entertaining and surprising. Mr. Zangwill has wisely confined himself to indicating the Essex dialect instead of striving to reproduce it, and has unearthed many delightfully quaint old words and phrases. The dialogue is racy and characteristic, and many of the descriptions have the quiet freshness and charm of the English countryside. The novel is not one to read in a hurry, but only when one has plenty of time at one's disposal. It is a leisurely, full-flavored narrative of lives in which "nothing happened too suddenly," lives of honest, hard-working, slow-witted, obstinate folk. Living close to the earth, sharing the placidity of the fields they tended, yet capable of a stubborn bravery, lives not untouched by romance, and lightened here and there with a gleam of spiritual beauty.

AMERICAN SHIPYARD HAS SET WORLD RECORD

Nineteen Vessels Completed In Month By Bethlehem Workers' Industry

Bethlehem, Pa., August 23.—It was announced at the offices of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., today that during the last month there had been completed in its yards and delivered to the owners nineteen vessels. These comprise ten thirty-five knot sea going torpedo boat destroyers and two large submarines for the United States Navy, and five large tank steamships and two ocean going rigs for the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation. Completion and delivery of nineteen ships in one month has never before been approached by any shipbuilding company in the United States or Europe.

While this record was being made all the other American shipyards combined delivered sixty-seven vessels, including, destroyers and submarines. There being thirty-five other yards this makes the average less than two ships a yard. The largest number of vessels previously delivered during a period of thirty days by a single company was only eight. From all the other yards building only naval vessels but three destroyers and one submarine were delivered.

Magnitude Of Work
Some idea of the magnitude of the work in completing nineteen vessels in a month is apparent when one considers that all the engines, boilers, deck machinery, as well as the complete hulls, were constructed by the Bethlehem corporation. For the ten destroyers Curtis turbine engines totaling over a quarter of a million shaft horsepower were built, also the Yarrow type water tube boilers necessary to generate such a vast volume of steam.

Each vessel successfully underwent severe Government trials before being inspected for delivery. Some months before every piece of material used in the construction of the vessels had to pass a rigid Government inspection, which, in the case of destroyers and submarines, is the most exacting in the world. To supply the shipyards with a steady flow of material necessary for the accomplishment of such rapid construction required 1,500 freight cars. This would make a freight train over eighteen miles long. Into the building of the nineteen ships went over 78,000 tons of material. Today if the ships could be anchored end to end they would make a parade over a mile long.

Naval experts on duty here were jubilant about the rapid construction of the destroyers. Before the war it took about a year and a half to build a destroyer. The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., has built and delivered to our Government a destroyer in 174 working days. The navy officers commented upon the fact that the vessels were not built under highly intensified war production conditions, that work was carried out on a regular eight hour schedule. The completion of ten destroyers in a month gives some idea as to what the United States was preparing for the German submarines in 1919. Ten destroyers in a month suggests why Germany quit.

July A Lucky Month

Officials here seemed to think that July may be their lucky month, for it was in July of last year that the Union plant of the company, located at San Francisco, launched the 12,000 ton freighter, the Invincible, in twenty-three working days delivering this vessel in sixty-six working days from the laying of the keel. This was the world's record last year.

If the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., maintains its present rate of construction it will deliver during the year over one-fourth of the steel vessels completed in all the shipyards of America and two and a half times as many as any one other company. The secret of such rapid production seems to lie in highly efficient organization, which has at its disposal all the facilities for the manufacture of all articles needed in the construction of ships. An efficiency expert here said that the co-ordination of all the Bethlehem shipbuilding interests in one central office here had made possible an organization capable of producing the world's record.

MASTERY OF ENGLISH

Under the title, "Mastery of English," Prof. H. B. Graybill, M.A., principal of the Secondary School of Canton Christian College, is issuing a series of text books for Chinese students. The work, which is being published by Edward Evans and Sons, of Shanghai, is in three volumes, prepared for the first three years of English, beginning in the higher Primary School. Prof.

Graybill has been teaching English to Chinese students for something like 20 years, so he may be accepted as an authority fully qualified for his task. He has, out of his experience, attempted to produce a work, as he himself says, that will constitute an English course complete in itself, interesting, and easy, conversational, reading, grammar, composition, dictation, memorizing and handwriting. The texts are prepared for both skilled and unskilled teachers. The author's instructions to teachers who intend to use the book are of special interest.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent, or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent, or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphia. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy and retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse. It causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Sir Arthur Pinero writes the introduction to the revised and limited edition of The Position of Peggy Harper, the fourth of a thirteen volume edition of Leonard Merrick's works to be published in this country. This romance of the stage was originally published here by Mitchell Kennerly in 1912 and everything about it will be remembered pleasantly except the manner of its conclusion. With all these years to think it over, it is astonishing that Mr. Merrick should have failed to remove the offending last chapter, but as the edition to which the volume belongs contains the author's final corrections, we must reconcile ourselves to it, and overlook its flatness in our enjoyment of the preceding chapters.

So many of us are familiar with "The Position of Peggy Harper" or have already had occasion to read reviews of it that the important thing about the present edition is that it is one of a uniform and limited collection, and has an introduction which adds greatly to its interest.

"Any ordinarily equipped story writer desiring to treat of the theater," Pinero writes, "could without great expenditure of mental effort, conceive the story of Peggy Harper. But, having conceived it, nobody, I am convinced could unfold it in such a consummately natural, unforced way as Mr. Merrick unfolds it, nor people it as he peoples it."

He will reveal in a seemingly careless half-sentence what another writer will take a page over, or will heavily underscore. He does with his pen what a fine catcher does with his needle. Perhaps it is the spectacle of the sombre figure of Tragedy tugging at Comedy's sleeve, and holding his sinister face close to hers, that has cost this author many thousands of readers. A shadow, if only a flicker, is seldom absent from the printed page; which is slightly disturbing to that class of reader who, in opposition to nature, likes his sunshine un-mottled."

Thirteen distinguished English authors have contributed introductions to the different Whether this is a publisher's device or bit of "backscratching," to use an excessively vulgar expression, on the part of the lions. Better still, it may be an evidence that the golden era of literary brotherhood has now arrived.

Dena. By Ella Waterbury Gardner. Boston: Small Maynard & Co.

To be fourteen with all girlhood's ecstatic ambitions and fancies and to have imposed on one the task of "mothering" an impractical, unsuccessful father and two brothers is a hard lot in life. Yet that was the job confronting Ardena Marsh of Arcadia, Iowa, as one reads in the opening chapter of Ella Waterbury Gardner's "Dena." Readers with memories will recall that in the height of the vogue of Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch a very practical critic of American manners discovered that Mrs. Wiggs should not be considered an amusing and laughable person at all. This critic insisted that ethically Mrs. Wiggs was shocking; and that she should be held up as a lesson in the immorality of shiftlessness.

We are afraid a critic of that sort would grow very much irritated over Ardena's career as set down in these pages. Fancy a fourteen-year-old girl who had saved up three dollars spending it on a pretty hat and going in debt for a dollar more for the millinery. And then fancy this same young person returning the hat and squandering the three dollars on fireworks for her brothers' Fourth of July. Likewise imagine this same girl going out of a rainy night to leave a mysterious bunch of violets on her school teacher's doorstep, and getting a violent cold over this foolish, unproductive task. Yes, we are afraid Ardena March would be harshly handled by practically minded folk. But fortunately there are many of us to whom the actions and motives of young girlhood are the loveliest and most amusing things in the world. And it is to these alone that this tale will appeal.

Strange objection to drinking the water scooped from beneath the green slime of the pond. But on certain matters he was rigidly conservative, and it was this conservatism which caused him to clash with Jinny the Carrier. Jinny's parents were dead and she lived with her old grandfather, who had been the village carrier, as his father was before him. At first he had taken her about with him because she was too little to leave at home; then she began to help him, and so by slow degrees, so very slow that the outcome was no shock even to the staid folk of Little Bradmarsh, she took over the work he was no longer able to do. But that "a female" should be a carrier seemed highly indecorous, if not grossly improper, to Will; Jinny's lively tongue annoyed him so much he called her "a minx," and thus these two entered on the long duel which could have only one ending.

Jinny is a charming heroine, but her love story is only an excuse for a detailed picture of life in this particular section of rural England during the middle of the nineteenth century. A great diversity of creeds flourished in Essex, and though the inhabitants of Little Bradmarsh were not many, there were among them Wesleyans and Baptists and "Peculiar," as well as a few adherents of the Church of England, while Martha Plynt possessed the distinction of being the only "Christadelphian" in the place, her husband remaining a "Peculiar" even while regarding the New Jerusalem, which, according to her creed, was soon to descend upon earth, "with a certain proprietary interest." The very leisurely method of the narrator gives time and scope for acquainting the reader with the ideas and beliefs of all the characters as well as with the small details of their daily lives. We go with Jinny on her rounds, and accompany her to the Chipstone cattle market, on that momentous occasion when she was intruded with the buying of a horse for Anthony Flippance, otherwise known as Tony Flip, the genial marionette showman who had once been a manager and was never able to conquer his desire to return to the legitimate stage. With her we go into the great kitchen of "The Black Sheep" and

SHANGHAI MEN SHOOT WINNING RIFLE TEAM

And Denny Represent
United States in Match Against England

Two men well known to Shanghai shooting enthusiasts, Lieutenant Commander W. A. Morgan and H. Denny, were members of the winning team that represented the United States against England in the outdoor international small-bore rifle match at Caldwell, New Jersey. The men moved on the U.S.S. "Albatross" to the China Station and were active in the Shanghai miniature rifle and revolver match. The match was featured by remarkable shooting, and at times a big crowd of visitors had to be restrained from rushing upon the field and congratulating the marksmen. The United States team of 20 men on its team against the same number representing Great Britain. The latter team made its scores a few days before the Americans shot, sending the results by cable. The figures were kept a secret until the close of the match. The final score of the United States was 7,617, with 7,523 for England, out of possible 8,000. Capt. E. Newitz of Great Britain, the only person in the United States, who had the final scores of the Britishers, was on the range during the match. His figures showed the British average to be 375 out of 400 points for the men on his team, but it was not until the match was well along toward the close that he estimated that if 40 American marksmen kept up their remarkable shooting they could win. Each man on the team was allowed 20 shots on the 50-yard range and 20 on the 100-yard range, using 22-caliber cartridges. Two schoolboys, A. M. Morgan and W. R. Stokes, the younger holding the schoolboy championship of the United States, did exceptionally good work in the match. Mrs. E. C. Morgan, wife of the team captain, also made a very creditable showing, turning in a score of 377. She is the only woman to have shot in an international team match. The winning team and the scores follow: Capt. G. L. Watkins, 391; A. Morgan, 388; N. H. Richard, 385; W. R. Stokes, 386; A. L. Morgan, 385; P. Raymond, 385; J. Miller, 384; D. A. Preussner, 383; E. Rice, 382; Lieut. Commander W. A. Lee, 382; Marine Sergeant W. Andrews, 382; J. Meunier, U. S. M. C., 379; G. Wesley, 379; Commander R. R. Hart, 377; Mrs. E. C. Morgan, 377; H. Denny, 376; A. Adensack, 375; J. Boles, 374; Schenck, 374; J. Wade, 374. Total, 7,617. Average per man, 380 out of possible 400.

ELMORE AND TANAKA IN FINAL FOR TITLE

Defeat Okada And Pott In Semi-Finals For Tennis Championship

On Saturday afternoon Messrs. J. Elmore and J. Tanaka will battle for the tennis singles championship of Shanghai as a result of the former gentleman beating W. Okada and the latter beating W. S. A. Pott yesterday afternoon in the semi-finals at the courts of the Cercle Sportif Francais. Elmore won 6-2, 5-7, 6-2 and Okada won in straight sets, 6-0 and 6-1. Of the two matches yesterday that of Elmore and Okada was by far the better, both players giving at times very brilliant exhibitions of tennis. Elmore was very strong on the back court and Okada's weakness in that place was his undoing. The first four games of the first set went to Elmore, deuce only being called once in the first game. The fifth went to Okada on his own service, after a long struggle. Elmore took the sixth; Okada, the seventh. The eighth, a love game, went to Elmore. The second set brought forth many rounds of applause from the big crowd of spectators. Of the twelve games played to decide this set, the eighth was the most interesting, it going to deuce no less than four times before Elmore gained the verdict. The score in the second set ran as follows: 1-0, 1-1, 1-2, 2-2, 3-3, 4-3, 4-4, 5-4, 5-5, 6-5 and finally 7-5, Okada's winning. In the last set Okada seemed to tire slightly. In the eight games played he gave Elmore no less than three games without scoring more than 15. Elmore took the set 6-2 the last game calling for deuce once. Pott had a very decided day in his match against Tanaka, last year's champion, and for a championship semi-final the match was one of the poorest seen here for some time. In the 13 games played in the sets, deuce was only called four times, once when Pott won the fourth game of the first set and three times during the second set.

HOOVER'S BIG PART IN COUNCIL'S TASK

His Influence Shown In Adoption Of His Recommendations For Hungary

HOST OF TRAINED WORKERS

Devoted Subordinates Ready To Execute His Plans For Reorganising Eastern Europe

By Walter Duranty
(New York Times)

Paris, August 24.—Herbert Hoover is today a figure of commanding importance in Europe. The feature of last week's Peace Conference news was the entrance of his strong, aggressive personality into the deliberations of the Supreme Council that had been wearily carrying on the fag-end of its labors. Exhausted by hard work and the hot weather, confused by the multiplicity of the problems, the diversity of opinion, and the irreconcilable opposition of the conflicting interests in Central and Eastern Europe, the members of the Council welcomed the man who not only told them what to do and how it should be done, but was willing to assume the responsibility of doing it.

At present there are three methods, plans, theories, ideas—call them what you will—for saving Europe from confusion, starvation and ruin. There is Bolshevism, that is, the universal dictatorship of the proletariat, international in scope and function, recognising no distinctions of class or caste or race, and with the abolition of private ownership and capital and the equal distribution of wealth among the wealth-producers as its cardinal principle.

Secondly, there is Bolshevism's antithesis, the reactionary system of allied nations pledged to suppress by force revolution, or even disorder, within their own boundaries and in their respective or mutual spheres of influence. By a natural corollary, such allies would combine for the suppression of external forces of disorder or revolt which appeared to menace general peace and security. That was the system adopted after the downfall of Napoleon—the Holy Alliance they called it then, because its sponsors believed that God had intended that there be rich and poor, powerful and weak, nobles and commons; that He had ordained distinctions of race and caste and class and given laws to maintain the established order against revolution that would place every one on the same level.

Thirdly, there is the League of Nations, an association of free peoples in which justice would take the place of force and disorder would be prevented by removing the grievances that caused it rather than by forcibly suppressing those whom those grievances had moved to active protest.

When President Wilson first outlined this conception of world government it was received with enthusiasm by the peoples of Europe, especially by France, England, and Italy. As months have passed those three countries have reverted more and more steadily, in practice if not in theory, to the old-fashioned system whose ideal was a world peaceful because well policed. Under it each Ally has been trying to do as much of the policing as possible, with the natural result that of many places which needed policing most some have not been policed at all because the Allies were unable to agree under whose flag the policeman should stand or because policemen under different flags have opposed each other and nullified each others' efforts.

Perhaps if the Holy Alliance system had had a free hand the results might have made a better showing, as the respective leaders would have been able to get together and parcel out colonies, protectorates, and spheres of influence in the good old way, until everything within their reach was disposed of. Each one would have policed his own area, and they might have combined for the policing of territory that refused to obey them—in this case Russia. They certainly had power to do so, and there is no reason why by this time the parceling-out process should not have been concluded to the satisfaction of the parcelers, if not always to that of the parceled.

Unfortunately for those who preferred this method—and among them are most of the rulers of France and a majority of England's and Italy's—they were hampered by the wide popularity of the League of Nations and by the fact that they were forced to work under the League's banner and outwardly, at least, conform to its principles. Most of the French statesmen, and those English and Italians who agreed with them, were unable to adjust themselves to the notion that the League could be effective without a properly constituted police force. That disbelieve is at the bottom of the persistent French efforts to introduce amendments to the League covenant providing for a permanent League army and General Staff. In default of such an instrument these statesmen have fallen back on the use of their own forces wherever it has been possible, according to the old-fashioned methods; but, having omitted to regulate the operation and co-operation of these forces as the old method demanded, they have fallen into confusion and disagreement that has steadily grown worse until, at the beginning of last week, the association of nations they represented was virtually paralysed. At the same time their skepticism toward the League of Nations and their constant reversion to the old system prevented the League and its genuine supporters from having a chance to mend matters, or, indeed, get a fair start at all.

Now, in despair at the hopeless muddle that resulted, the Council has appealed to Hoover for advice in the case of Hungary, has taken it and is following his directions. Through Hoover the Council can command the services of a host of trained and devoted subordinates already stationed in the most troubled areas of Europe and near Asia. By a network of telephone systems far superior to any means of communication available to any one else he was, as Europe's Food Controller, instantly informed of events and was able to give his own orders while the Council was still groping in the dark and compelled to issue instructions that might, and often did, arrive so late that the circumstances which gave rise to them had entirely changed. Then coal was added to his jurisdiction. By food men live, by coal in the modern world, they work. That in addition, the Council should give him practically a free hand in dealing with the problems of reorganisation in the East and Southeast, would be little more than recognition of the authority which he already possessed.

Praise Of Hoover's Recent Action

London, August 25.—On the eve of his departure for America, Herbert Hoover, Director General of the International Relief Organisation, is the subject of warm tributes by the British press—particularly the Liberal sections—of gratitude for his achievements in laying the specter famine in Europe, and for his potent influence against reactionary tendencies. He is credited by the papers with being directly responsible for countering the Rumanian coup in Hungary and for the overthrow of the Archducal regime in that country.

The Manchester Guardian's Paris correspondent declares that Mr. Hoover and his supporters have given a new impulse to the Supreme Council, and that they are determined to goad the Council into "making the League of Nations idea a living reality all along the line."

The correspondent adds: Mr. Hoover has carried out his first resolution with brilliant success, and for the moment is master of the situation. It is even rumored that he is determined to tackle the huge Rumanian problem which is overshadowing Europe, and the lesser question of German prisoners."

On Making Sure

There is nothing like making sure where one's health is concerned. Good health is the best guarantee that life shall be a success. Now it is well-known that digestive disorders are the cause of more cases of ill-health than any other class of ailment. The digestive system is so extensive, so complex and so hard-worked, that its liability to derangement is not astonishing. Happily, however, many digestive ailments can be easily remedied. Happily, too, many digestions need never go wrong. You can make reasonably sure that your digestion will not fail you, even under trying conditions, if you get into the excellent way of taking Beecham's Pills. This "Wonderful Medicine"—as it has been called—does really work wonders with the digestive system. Beecham's Pills impart tone to the stomach, regulate the action of the liver and kidneys and gently stimulate the bowels into healthy activity. Get into the habit of making sure. Have recourse to Beecham's Pills at the first sign of digestive trouble. Make sure of your health by taking

Beecham's Pills.

Nationalisation of Industry

THAT the industrial situation in Great Britain will be eased by the defeat of the railway workers, we regard as certain, and we further feel that the result of the strike will have a favorable effect on labor in the United States, now torn by the steel strike. Labor, both in England and in America, has been fighting for nationalisation of the larger industries and has pretty thoroughly convinced itself that therein lies the solution of the problem. In other words, Labor recently has been feeling that strikes do not settle the problem, however steadily it may win them, and now that it has lost one, and a big one at that, it will be inclined, to some extent at least, to abandon the strike program.

President Lee of the American Railway Brotherhood, recently said that he was convinced that the strike itself offered no solution, but that while everybody was striking and winning, it seemed foolish for any particular body of men not to do the same and thus get their share of the immediate spoils.

A writer in the Fortnightly Review says that in discussing the recent intervention of labor in political matters with a member of an important British trade union, the man said to him:
"The State? Bah! We are the State." Showing that something has happened to the State since Louis Fourteenth's time.

The writer then goes on to say that recent events in England have shown that nationalisation is no remedy for labor disputes and that men employed by the State or by local authorities, will go on strike as readily as men in private employment. Nor will it, he adds, provide abundance if the workers continue their policy of limiting output and increasing wages. "If, as-is-to be anticipated, the nationalisation of industries should lead to administrative chaos, general unproduction and economic ruin, the nation would drift into anarchy and civil war. The introduction of nationalisation may lead not only to economic disaster, but to political disaster as well. The policy, of organized labor has been mistaken throughout. It has been a policy of industrial suicide."

On the other hand, the workers have grievances that cannot be buried. Solution of their problem, which is also capital's problem, is imperatively necessary.
In this connection, the National City Bank of New York has seized upon the occasion of Andrew Carnegie's death, to issue, in its September bulletin, a very thoughtful study of Carnegie's life and business activities, pointing out to the workers some of the pitfalls of nationalisation.
We read:

"Andrew Carnegie's career is very suggestive of comment upon the proposal to have the Government embark in industry. If Mr.
Carnegie had been hired by the Government, after the Lenin plan, to devote his life to the development of the steel industry upon a salary amounting in the aggregate to his living expenses, the charge upon the community for his services would have been practically the same. He could not have devoted himself to the task more completely, and allowing that his zeal was undiminished he would have had nothing like the independence of action or free use of resources.

Imagine him before Congressional committees (changing every two years) trying to persuade them to adopt his policies and dissuade them from distributing the steel industry throughout the States on the basis of population and according to the principles laid down for the public building and river and harbor appropriations!

"Or, imagine him trying to get permission to scrap practically new equipment in order to carry out some new idea; and imagine his position, and the task he would have defending himself against critics and rivals if some of his ventures proved unsuccessful!

"The whole theory of having the Government conduct industry is based upon the idea that the profits of private industry are lost to the public; that private wealth is hoarded for exclusive use and consumption. People think of a rich man's wealth as withdrawn from the common supply, and that other people have less in consequence, but that is true only of the negligible portion which he and his dependents actually consume. Additions to capital all go to increasing the common supply, so that everybody has more in consequence.

"How much more of the wheat crop did Mr. Carnegie withdraw from the common supply after his income passed a million a year than while his pay was $50 per month, and how much more did he contribute to the wheat supply by reducing the price of steel than he ever withdrew from it for his own support?

"How much more has Mr. Ford withdrawn from the common food supply since his income was a million a year than while he was working for wages, and how much more has he contributed to the food supply by developing the farm tractor than he has ever withdrawn from it?

"The greater part of all the accretions to private wealth are in the form of equipment for increasing the production of things of which the rich already have an abundance, and of which, few in number as they are, they can consume comparatively little. The benefits accrue inevitably to the masses of the people."

This, to us, seems very sound.
But if the strike has not solved the Capital-and-Labor problem, and nationalisation won't do it, and the workers refuse to return to pre-war conditions, how are we going to come at the matter?

Annoying

In a crowded omnibus a stout woman vainly endeavored to get her fare out of the pocket of her cloak, which was tightly buttoned as a precaution against pickpockets.

After she had been working in vain for some minutes, a gentleman seated on her right said:
"please allow me to pay your fare."

The lady declined with some acerbity and recommended her attacks on the pocket.

After these had continued for a little time her fellow passenger said: "You really must let me pay your fare. You have already undone my braces three times, and I cannot stand it any longer."

Joshing The Diplomatist

There is a certain youth attached to one of the foreign missions at Washington whose habit it is, shortly after introduction to some fair lady, immediately to turn the conversation into channels favorable for the discussion of the tender passion.

"I observe," said he, on one occasion, when he had just been presented to a charming young woman, "that you wear a most attractive locket. Tell me, does it contain the token of some past affair of the heart?"

"Yes," smiled the lady, who had been warned of the diplomatist's weakness, and who thought to have a bit of fun with him. "It does contain a love token—a lock of my husband's hair."

"A widow!" exclaimed the susceptible foreigner, as he edged closer. "Why, some one told me your husband was alive."

"He is," answered the young woman, "but his hair is gone."

Serious Economic Injustices Of Peace Treaties

By Arthur Henderson (Labor leader in the British War Cabinet, president of International Labor Conference now in session in Lucerne, Switzerland.)

The workers of the International are confronted by a world situation of unparalleled complexity and difficulty. There are ominous signs of a coming great social upheaval, and the duty of the International is to warn the governments of the magnitude of the crisis and of its menacing possibilities.

The masses of the producers have been profoundly stirred by the thought of what they might achieve by revolutionary methods, and the political and economic conditions have conspired to enable the workers to seek more effective and expeditious results from a policy of direct action.

The foundations of social structure have been shaken by the terrible pressure of the last five years, and every nation is staggering under a colossal burden of debt. Behind the disorganization of trade and industry stands the spectre of unemployment, and over many countries hangs the shadow of famine.

Before the Winter ends a dreadful convulsion of anger and despair may seize the people.
The capitalist governments, bankrupt of expedients, merely reiterate the cry of "increased production," but the workers ask:
"Production for what purposes?"

Industrial Outlook
"That the profiteers and the exploiter may continue to feed on the substance of working-class life and that industry may still yield profits to the non-producers, or to enable the exhausted, impoverished peoples to re-establish and improve their standard of life and thus to elevate the general level of existence?"

Industrial revival is possible only when society gives the producers by hand and brain the full fruits of their labor, and assures the social and economic emancipa-tion of the people.

We demand the immediate convocation of the League of Nations Council, because it possesses the power under the covenant to consider the revision of the treaty, to deal with matters affecting the world peace, and to be by a two-thirds majority to admit any State to membership of the League. The latter question is a cardinal issue for the workers since there is no possibility of fruitful results from the working of the League with Germany, Russia, Hungary and other States have been included.

Fail To Meet Demands
In our opinion the serious economic injustices in the treaties, the veiled annexations, the indemnities masked as reparations, the denial of the right of self-determination, the frustrations of legitimate colonial claims, and the vicious one-sided military arrangements, fall altogether to meet the demands of organized democracy for deliverance from the economic and political misery and the burden of national resources involved by armaments, standing armies and conscription.

We are intimately concerned with the Russian problem because serious differences of opinion exist within the labor movement regarding the theory and practice of Soviet government, but there is no difference with respect to the reactionary tendencies of armed intervention in Russia's internal affairs. In the name of the International Socialism we must demand a reversal of this policy. The re-character of Kolchak's enterprise, supported with material and diplomatic help by the French and British Governments, can no longer be concealed.

Russia Needs Help
Supported by all the anti-democratic elements in Russia and the capitalist and land-owning interests, Kolchak has established a military dictatorship by methods as ruthless and as brutal as any charged against those who sought to set up a proletarian dictatorship. Kolchak's aims are not even so worthy. He now knows his methods have an-tagonized the Socialist Russian groups consistently opposed to the Bolsheviks, and that it is no longer possible for the Allied Governments to pretend that their intervention was dictated by respect for democratic principles. It is a denial of the elementary principles of democracy —and however much we are opposed to the methods employed to establish a proletarian dictatorship, we believe in International Socialism—and if intervention succeeded it would destroy all the fruits of the revolution.

Therefore, we hold strongly to the view that the Allied Governments should withdraw all support from these reactionary adversaries. No troops, munitions, money or diplomatic aid should be given.

Russia needs all the material and moral help that can possibly be given, but so long as she remains an outlaw from the commonwealth of nations such help will not be forthcoming. Steps must be taken to ascertain how far the Russian Soviet Government is prepared to modify its present attitude and to abandon some of its methods, as the report of the American Mission indicated they were ready to do.

Diplomatic relations with them will then be possible, and the International must renew its efforts to obtain facilities for duly accredited commissions to visit Russia and Hungary and report on the political and economic situation there. Our plain duty is to get in touch with all classes of Russian Socialists and the revolutionary governments, in order to endeavor to promote better relations and maintain labor solidarity.

Problems Of Finance

The problem of world finance demands the attention of the workers, since governments have shirked their immediate responsibilities by borrowing at enormous rates of interest, and a large part of the resulting debt, representing a burden upon industry, went in war profits to a comparatively few people.

It is necessary, therefore, to institute some method of registration of fortunes, pre-war and post-war, in order to locate precisely and to tax war profits. A capital levy, steeply graduated, must be imposed as the first step toward sound finance, involving neither violence nor repudiation.
Questions of the socialisation or democratic control of industry must receive the International's serious attention. It declared for the common ownership of land fifty years ago at the Lausanne Congress, since when the entire question of public ownership has become practical politics.

Railways, mines and minerals will be public property in Britain very soon. The status of the workers must be raised and full use made of the machinery of the Labor Charter of the League of Nations to improve international labor standards. Serious efforts must be made to bring about a greater measure of common action between the trade union, co-operative and Socialist International. The working-class movement is one and indivisible, and without sacrificing autonomy this three-fold organization will be a world alliance of citizens, consumers and producers, able to dictate policies to governments and to build a new social order.

Mercy In Tartar Stronghold

By Major Kendall Emerson, U.S.A.
(American Red Cross Bulletin)

Tumen, the Tartar stronghold!
The outlaw spirit of a vanished Genghis Khan broods over the nestling one-storied log village on its Ural plateau. All about it circles a vast moat 40 feet deep, into which the passing waters of a turbid river may be let in time of peril from bandit foes without. The tiny houses have an air of other times about them, often made with walls two and three logs thick against enemy attack, and standing today as stern and rugged as when built by their first owners a few centuries ago.

In this rude setting was born the notorious peasant Rasputin, who later became that arch impostor and deadly traitor to his country, whose malign influence did so much to hasten the downfall of the Tsar.

Through the riot of a winter sunset we drove, twice crossing the moat, to where high on its further bank rose the white drift of a splendid school building, its walls tinged with reflected lustre from the flaming western sky.
Flanking the school on a rise to the left stood a graceful Russian church, with domes of green and gold, a thing of poignant beauty, with its priceless girdle of birches holding it in their feathery embraces.

And then swiftly the color faded and we stood looking down on the sordid little village buried in the winter's harvest of snowdrifts, the logs left black stains against the spotless white. Once again the vision of Russia, a land of sudden change and sharpest contrast, struck keenly into our souls.

Now the lights gleamed from the school and we entered to see the transformation wrought by our Red Cross workers in its halls and classrooms. Miss Farmer and her bustling little Miss McGregor, of the British Red Cross, just arrived, but with her vigorous organizing powers already hard at work, and a list of thirty improvements for the place culled during her five days' observation. This hospital was established for the Czechs last autumn when they were fighting bitterly along the eastern front.

Dr. Lewis went up to Buchedu to take charge and a few American sisters pushed hardly out along the war-torn railway to help him. The Czechs served loyally, and Austrian prisoners were commandeered for the heavier work. Glad enough for the release from their desperate prison life, no laborers could have been more faithful and the mere suggestion that their places were still held open for them in the prison barracks was the only discipline ever required.

The story of the school is an interesting one. From a casual survey of the village of Tumen, none would suspect anything but poverty, ignorance and deadening cold as its contribution to the country. Yet in this little town two brothers, through frugal devotion to duty and shrewd business sense, had become wealthy men. One had systematized the fishing industry, advancing equipment, staking newly arrived fishermen, tiding over bad years and marketing the catch to such advantage that he had won the goodwill of his people while storing away his own large fortune.

As a means of showing his grate-tude he had built this splendid school, so apparently out of place in the prevailing surroundings.
It is a vast, three-storied structure of brick and concrete, newly finished, fireproof throughout, with modern plumbing electricity and water laid on, and in every way as fine a building for the purpose as could be found in our country. It was a private school, no doubt largely agricultural and vocational in character, and one-half of it is still used for this purpose, while the Red Cross maintains a hospital of three hundred beds in the remaining half, giving an intimation of the size and typically Russian scale on which it has been constructed.

On the second floor was a ward with thirty Chinese Bolshevik prisoners, all with hands or feet frozen, many with resulting am-putations. The majority of these Chinese in connection with the Russian Revolution is a pathetic one. During the war conscription was so complete in Russia that there were no men left in the large cities to do the more menial tasks of labor, janitor service, street cleaning, and so forth.

Again, the mines were stripped of Russian workers and foreign labor had to be imported to keep them in operation. Many thousands of Chinese coolies were brought from Manchuria and other parts of China, more than thousand coming to Moscow alone.
The patients we saw were from those thirty moon-shaped faces at the comfort they were having in the American hospital indicated total oblivion of the frosted fingers and toes. It was a very tame lot of Bolsheviks that we gazed on through a blue haze of cigarette smoke and Oriental emanations.

On a cot in one of the vast corridors lay a tiny child of seven, the only civilian patient among that rough array of wounded soldiers. She was a baby with a neglected tubercular hip, who had passed three years of suffering prior to the coming of the Red Cross.

After visiting the improvised, but most satisfactory kitchens in the basement and commandeering some of the excellent white bread for which these kitchens have won an enviable reputation, we bade a late farewell to a drowsy hospital and drove back to our train through the starlit night.
Three weeks before a hundred mutineers had been stood up in the village square at nightfall and sprayed with machine guns and since then no one had been allowed out of doors after dark. The ban had been lifted, otherwise we would have been prisoners till morning in the hospital we had just left.

On Growing Old

By John Mascefield

Be with me, Beauty, for the fire is dying, My dog and I are old, too old for roving;
Man, whose young passion sets the spindrift flying, Is soon too lame to march, too cold for loving.
I take the book and gather to the fire, Turning old yellow leaves, minute by minute
The clock ticks to my heart; a withered wire Moves a thin ghost of music in the spinnet.
I can not sail your seas, I can not wander Your mountains, nor your downlands, nor your valleys, Even again, nor share the battle yonder Where your young knight the broken squadron rallies:

Only stay quiet while my mind remembers
The beauty of fire from the beauty of embers.
Beauty, have pity; for the young have power,
The rich their wealth, the beautiful their grace, Summer of man its fruit-time and its flower, Spring-time of man all April in a face.
Only, as in the jostling in the Strand,
Where the mob thrusts, or loiters, or is loud,
The beggar with the saucer in his hand, Asks only a penny from the passing crowd.
So, from this glittering world with all its fashion,
Its fire and play of men, its stir, its march,
Let me have wisdom, Beauty, wisdom and passion.
Bread to the soul, rain where the summers parch.
Give me but these, and though the darkness close,
Even the night will blossom as the rose.

Stopping At Brest

By Wilbur Forrest

Brest, the homegoing port of the American Expeditionary Forces, has withstood many scandals, but the greatest scandal of all is Brest's so-called hotels.

American officers who have passed through Brest might testify that any second or third rate New York hotel, transplanted to Brest, would make its owner comfortably rich within a month and very rich within a half year if the flow of troops through Brest continued. What Americans have stood for in the way of hotels at Brest would have caused national legislation had it happened in the United States. But the homegoing have let the fact that they were going home temper their complaints when the other side came into view.

An American officer arrives in Brest. If he is not assigned to the one hotel operated by the American Y.M.C.A., for officers only, he is, to use army parlance, simply out of luck. He is first directed to the one hotel which Brest believes is a first class place. He enters the door, turns to the left and faces a French woman who sits behind a glass enclosed counter. He asks for a room. Nine times out of ten he is curtly informed that there are no rooms. He sees a man approach the desk, and while he is coolly ignored by the woman the man pays his bill. This gives him an indication that the man has given up a room, and he asks the woman again if she can give him a room. The answer is "No!" and the tone of the "No!" is a don't-give-a-d— tone. He curses under his breath and leaves. Perhaps a colored comes in a few moments later, and accepting it as a great favor, he gets the room just vacated by the man who paid his bill.

Perhaps the attitude of this hotel toward its "guests" is better shown by an incident on the occasion of President Wilson's second arrival in France. The George Washington pulled into Brest Harbor, and on the assumption that President Wilson and his retinue would come ashore for one night in Brest's "first class" hotel the management "saved" every "guest" two hours "to pack up his things and get into the street. There were no more hotel rooms in Brest for anybody, and the "guests" remonstrated that such a thing was unheard of in the United States. They were informed, however, that such things were done in Brest, and were told to "get out." They "got" and they did considerable swearing, not only under their breaths but audibly. The management had simply acted on an assumption that President Wilson would stop at Brest's "first class" hotel. And the one delightful circumstance to assuage the feelings of the ousted "guests" was that President Wilson decided to take the train direct to Paris.

Ordinarily, however, the American officer of other person who fails to break into Brest's "first class" hotel goes to the nearest corner and asks the M. P. where he may find another hotel. The M. P. directs him to one a block away. He enters with a rather light heart, telling himself that this isn't quite so "first class," but it will do. But here again he is told by another French woman behind the desk that there is "nothing doing," but if he will come around in two or three days she may have something. A porter, seeking a tip, informs him in English that there is another hotel up the street. He seeks it and finds a third or fourth class establishment with a "nothing doing" sign hanging on the desk. This sign is there so he will not bother the desk by asking. He asks anyway, and is given to understand by the desk that the desk is considerably annoyed.

Falling everywhere so far, he goes back to the M. P. and asks the location of "most any place he can lay his head." The M. P. directs him to a boarding house in a back street. After looking over the entrance—broken bottles and rubbish in the narrow street—he bucks up his courage and enters. A woman in a wrapper with a shape like a bed slat and slatternly in general tells him that her rooms are all taken. Breathing a sigh of relief, he escapes into the night, or day, or whatever it happens to be, and appeals to most any one who may tell him of something. By the time he has put in two or three hours at bed hunting in Brest he would sleep in a dog kennel. Finally, perhaps, he appeals to American headquarters and finds a bunk at Pontanezin camp.

Possibly Brest hotels are responsible for more disgusted Americans leaving France than any other feature of this home-going port. It is almost certain that many of those who some day return to Europe will route their voyage through some other port than Brest. But Brest hotelkeepers do not care. At least, that is their attitude just at present.

Short Cuts

There is one rule in mathematics which nearly everybody in America believes in and practices—

Viz.: "A bee-line is the shortest distance between two points."

Personally, we've only come in contact with a bee once. On that occasion, it wasn't the bee, but us, that made the bee-line. And there was no doubt about its being the shortest distance between two points—one of the two points being the bee's, and the other being the beehive's.

Nothing is more popular with the average individual, however, than the bee-line; that is to say, the short cut. If a landscape gardener lays an artistic winding path, everyone ignores it and cuts across the grass. Every vacant lot has a well-defined diagonal. Every public park has grooves to prove that the man who laid out the pavements was all wrong.

In education, all you have to do is announce a short cut to something or other, and folks will flock to try it. A man who has spent thirty years with the English language and still muddles it, about five times a day, will expect to master French in five lessons.

A woman who bangs her hair every night and her piano every morning will grab a short cut and expect to sit on Paderewski's stool, now that Paderewski has gone into Polish politics.

Another woman with a straight-up-and-down silhouette expects, after taking three development exercises, to be qualified to step into Annette Kellermann's shoes—or tight.

A man who has spent ten years losing his hair hopes to restore the crop with ten applications to his glistening dome.

You can become a millionaire in your spare time, if you can just spare enough, and a rich relative leaves you $999,999 when he dies.

You can enjoy a fashionable operation if you will go to the hospital and let the doctors make a short cut to your appendix.

Chairs Cause Round Shoulders

Quadrupeds and monkeys never have curvature of the spine and are never round-shouldered. Human children are often one or the other or both, round shoulders being the most common.

"The creeping infant is a quadruped until increased strength of the gluteal and lumbar muscles makes the erect position possible," writes Dr. E. H. Bradford, Professor of Orthopaedic Surgery, Harvard University Medical School, in the New York Medical Journal. The baby should remain a quadruped until its back muscles are strong enough to bear the weight that the spine has to carry; but the infant is ambitious and active and it is not always possible to keep it from beginning to walk. In such cases measures must be taken to induce the little one to lie down as much as it will, to correct faults of sitting and standing, and to develop the muscles that need strength.

Dr. Bradford condemns the chairs in which the school child sits. "Home chairs are practically all designed for adults and therefore not fitted for children. In primitive societies the children when not active in the erect position were either recumbent, prone, lounging in positions in which the superimposed upper trunk weight did not fall upon the lower portion of the spine or pelvis, or sitting upon their haunches with their spinal column free to move, adapting itself to balance and an adjustment of weight and changing the play of the back and trunk muscles, thus furnishing rest to overused muscles and yet constantly exercising these muscles in steadying the erect attitude."

The use of chairs is modern; in ancient days they were reserved for rulers, ordinary people sitting on low stools. "The spinal curves so common in modern life may be considered as chair-back distortions, which are largely due to modern conditions of prolonged chair-back seating."

For round shouldered children Dr. Bradford recommends lounging on the floor, the use of chairs with sloping backs that will support the loins, creeping on all fours with a weight hung from the neck, sitting and walking while carrying on the head a small cushion and later a basket in which weights of varying amounts may be placed.

He deems it useless to urge the abolition of chairs from the nursery, though the substitution of low stools, divans and mats would be beneficial. He urges climbing, pulling, bar-hanging and other exercises that strengthen the muscles of the back.

He says boys will outgrow these tendencies if generally healthy and if they have plenty of outdoor play. But girls need more thorough treatment, though it is unwise to let them know what they are being treated for. All treatment must be systematic and persevered in for a long time.

You cannot imagine men at war and dogs failing to come forward and join them in the struggle as devoted partisans. You never heard of a dog deserting or refusing to go over the top at the zero hour.

Just as a dog would rush to the aid of his master in a battle with a burglar, he used his bark and bite to the last fibre of his being and the last breath in his shaggy body in resistance to his master's enemy at the front. If you attacked his master, you assailed him; and if the dogs of war could have had their way, they would have fought it out among themselves.—Philadelphia Ledger.

fall like a plummet to the water below. The action is rapid, the wings are in motion by the time the water is reached, and out of the spray emerges the hawk with a fine fish in his talons, to be borne away to the accompaniment of flashing drops thrown from the struggling fish.

The other day on a suburban lawn a mother oriole had coaxed a youngster out of the pendent nest, hung on the extreme end of branch where no enemy could find entrance. Just as the little one was making the acquaintance of all outdoors, a sharp-eyed hawk saw the newcomer, and in an instant the oriole was taking his first and last flight in the possession of the hawk, while the mother flew alongside pouring out her heart in rage and pain. Thus they passed out of sight.

Some time later the mother oriole returned alone, and for hours sat near the nest giving way to her grief with distressing cries.

The strength of the hawk's foot is remarkable. Some year ago a hunter shot a hen-hawk of large size, breaking a wing. Down came the hawk and the hunter advanced to secure the chicken-thief. The wounded bird made no attempt to run, but faced his foe. When a few feet only separated them he jumped and attempted to fasten his talons in the hunter's foot. A pair of heavy hunting boots were nearly cut through as the sharp claws slipped off the instep. Had the hawk got a fair hold the foot would have been pierced.—Exchange.

THE WAITRESS'S REVENGE

Gets Even With Telephone Manager For A Protested Charge

This girl doesn't pretend to be in the statesmanship class. But she showed a telephone manager a thing or two in simple justice.

She had had occasion to do some long distance telephoning from Stillwater, where she is a waitress in a restaurant. She did not get the party with whom she wished to talk. Nevertheless she had to pay for the message under the Burlesonian station-to-station, person-to-person system.

A day or two later the manager of the telephone company at Stillwater, to whom she had protested in vain for charging her merely for "the report" that the party she wished to talk to was not available for conversation, was waited on by this waitress. Among other things he ordered a piece of cherry pie. He was advised that the larder was innocent of cherry pie at that time. As he came up to the cashier he noted on his check that the pie was charged to him just the same.

He protested somewhat violently—just how violently one may imagine by picturing himself in his place. But the waitress was there with the quick reply that the charge was for "the report" that there was no cherry pie to be had.

This pie story ought to travel the length and breadth of the land. The charge the waitress made was exactly as legitimate as the charge she had been compelled to pay.—Sioux Falls Press.

BAD, BUT INTERESTING

A Reasonable Appreciation Of A Certain Bird Of Prey

Although the hawk undoubtedly has a right to his dinner, there is frequently little sympathy shown for the bird of prey, but much for the victim that furnishes forth the feast.

REVOLUTIONARY WORDS

Vocabulary Of Today A Borrower From Those Of Other Times Of Trouble

One of the phases of the world-wide debates that are now in progress is the extent to which they are making use of, and, indeed, in many cases are based on, the terms and phrases of revolutionaries who lived in another day, and whose dicta, if quoted at all prior to the War, were quoted in dark halls where unhappy assemblages met.

But yesterday only the Socialists were speaking of the "capitalistic order," and they only by way of expressing their contempt and hatred. Today it is not only permissible but hackneyed to employ the whole socialist vocabulary, with its "capitalism," its "class conflict," its "economic determinism," its "bourgeoisie," its "proletariat," its "class consciousness," and the rest. The terms are handled on terms of as careless familiarity as ever we had learned to employ "liberty," "freedom," and "equality."

Kerensky besought the world, wringing his hands, to recognise that revolution in Russia was social; but "social" had an unwelcome sound then, and it spelled Kerensky's doom. "Soviets," which were but a form of joint economic and political organisation, were heathen, fire-breathing things which only to mention a few months ago was to court annihilation; yet now the term is buried in America with no more seriousness than "demagogue" was hurled a few years back, and we are actually examining a semi-Soviet proposal known as the Plumb plan without any great approval of its features but without any horror, either.

Yesterday to speak of "industrial democracy" was to be rebuffed as an anarchist. Today we are all for industrial democracy, and are glib in ringing the changes upon it, such as "constitutionalism in industry," "equality of economic opportunity," and so on and on.

More interesting, even, than that, there is the phenomenon also of references to deeper, more abstruse, more philosophical ideas, the theories or systems of thought that are behind all the catchwords. Just recently a "grange" Senator, the junior from Iowa, was caught in a quotation as saying that he was not—or was—an "impossibilist." And somebody about the same time enriched the debate with "perfectibilist."

Truly, the times are altered; for the better, no doubt. New ideas, or old ones in new dresses, dance on the stage to excite us. We are still blundering ahead in the effort to grasp more and more equality, more and more democracy, more and more of the square deal from and to all men by and from all their fellows, and meantime, by keeping the processes of production going, to avoid starvation. If anybody doubts that we are on the verge of the final success let him look.

See—we have a new set of slogans!—Des Moines Register.

HEROIC DOGS OF WAR

Splendid Service Rendered By Them In All The Armies

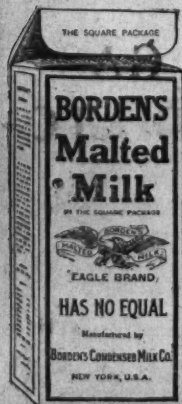

Bob—evidently one of the noble army of besties named for the late Lord Roberts of Kandahar—has deservedly received the silver medal of the National Canine Defense League for a heroic rescue. Like most Simon-pure, full-blood heroes, Bob didn't stop to think whether he was playing the hero or not—he merely did his duty as he saw it, which was to bark his head off when he found himself a fellow-passenger on a raft with a lot of half-frozen, unconscious sailors, whose warship had been sunk by the Germans off the coast of Holland. As a result, his distress-signals were heard aboard a destroyer about to relinquish the search, and the ten men were saved.

Dog heroes of the war are numerous, and one likes to hear of Fend F.A.H., who helped dig his master out of a cave-in trench; or Judge, who swam the river with the ends of ropes in his mouth to draw the boats over, till the German snipers got him; or little Vesie, who went everywhere with Raymond Carroll; or the noble Red Cross dogs who sought out the wounded and led the rescuers to them; or the messenger dogs whom no temptation could seduce from duty. But in all these transactions the best of the four-footed friends of man was merely running true to form.

SALVAGE MILLIONS FROM SEA'S DEPTHS
British Admiralty Recovers 440 Vessels And Property Worth $250,000,000

U-BOAT'S SECRETS FOUND
Divers Recover Documents Still Clutched In Hand Of Officer Of German Submarine

London, August 30.—The salvage of 440 vessels and the recovery of property valued at $250,000,000 is the record in four years of the Admiralty Department which, under Rear Admiral Philpotts, has been conducting salvage operations in home and foreign waters. The department came into existence in the Autumn of 1915 and finished its last contract this week. This was the salvaging of an American steamer at Penarth.

From the beginning of October, 1915, to the end of November, 1918, British allied and neutral vessels totalling 1,623,551 gross tons have been salvaged. Suggestions have appeared now and again that weird appliances were being employed in this salvage work, but only principles already existing, although vastly improved, have been used. The Admiralty relied wholly upon steamers with extraordinary pumps and a series of six lifting lighters, converted from hopper dredgers, which can support a strain of 2,000 tons with three-inch wires.

In one instance, indeed, where a collier was sunk at her anchorage at Rosyth, they lifted her, and her weight was then 2,700 tons—a figure which before the salvage department was created would have been regarded as impossible. Within three months the collier was in commission again, notwithstanding that she had been submerged for seven months. Once the conventional methods were slightly diverged from. This was at Folkestone. The troopship Onward caught fire and was scuttled, and, in the absence of capstans on the quay, arrangements were made for disengaged railway engines on the shore to haul the wreck upright.

During one of the pushes on the western front when Boulogne Harbor was a vital link in the lines of communication the grain ship Araby grounded in the fairway and broke her back. The salvage fleet promptly cut her in halves and brought the halves across to England, thus clearing what might have proved a disastrous obstruction in the way of a projected attack.

In the case of the Laurentic, from which bullion valued at $9,500,000 was recovered by divers, working at a depth of twenty-three fathoms, strong rooms in which bars of gold had been locked had to be forced with explosives and the debris removed.

Among the notable successes of the salvage fleet was the case of a convoy of three merchantmen and two destroyers which, sailing from Liverpool, ran into a heavy fog and grounded off the north-east coast of Ireland, four of them within a radius of half a mile. Salvage craft hurried to the spot and the whole convoy was refloated in ten days. Ingenuity accounted in part for the swift success secured, for the destroyers were employed to race around the waters at top speed and so create a wash in which one or two of the stranded vessels slid off.

Similar methods were used to refloat the United States transport Narragansett, which stuck on Bembridge Ledge, Isle of Wight, and was in danger of breaking her back. One of the smartest pieces of salvage linked with seamanship relates to a U-boat with a displacement of 700 tons which was sunk thirty-five miles off the Tyne. The Salvage Department was ordered to bring her into dock for examination, with a view to obtaining information concerning the enemy designs and plans.

Divers located the wreck and passed lifting wires under her which in turn were attached to a lighter and the whole boat was taken in tow and brought to the mouth of the Tyne. There the submarine slipped from the wires but again she was grappled up and brought into the harbor. When the armistice was signed the Salvage Department was engaged in raising a U-boat that, having become entangled in the British defensive nets, had "touched off" a mine and gone to the bottom. A diver who descended for examination and to secure any secret papers and documents she might carry found that the crew consisted entirely of German officers. Protruding through a hatchway were a pair of hands, in the lifeless fingers of which were clutched the documents the diver sought.

When death came that member of the crew was endeavoring to cast adrift the secret orders for submarines the "last hope" of the cruise.
